Choice Poetry.

ARE THE CHILDREN AT HOME?

Each day when the glow of sunset
Fades in the western sky,
And the wee ones, tired of playing,
Go tripping lightly by,
I steal away from my husband,
Asleep in his easy chair,
And watch from the open doorway
Their faces fresh and fair.

Along in the dear old homestead,
That once was full of life,
Ringing with girlish laughter,
Echoing girlish strife,
We two are waiting together,
And off as the shadows come,
With treasonous voice he calls me,
"It is night! are the children at home?"

"Yes, love," I answered him gently,
"They're all home long ago,"
And I sing in my quivering treble,
A song so soft and low,
Till the old man drops to slumber,
With his head upon his hand,
And I fell to myself the number
Home in a better land.

Home, where never a shadow
Shall dim their eyes with tears;
Where the smile of God is on them
Through all the summer years!
I know!—yet my arms are empty,
That fondly folded seven,
And the mother heart within me
Is almost starved for heaven.

Sometimes in the dusk of evening
I only shut my eyes,
And the children are all about me,
A vision from the skies;
The babes whose dimpled fingers
Lost the way to my breast,
And the beautiful ones, the angels,
Passed to the world of the blessed.

With never a cloud upon them,
I see their radiant brows;
My boys that I gave to freedom;
The red sword sealed their vows!
In a tangled Southern forest,
Twin brothers bold and brave,
They fell; and the flag they died for,
Thank God! floats over their graves.

A lassie, and the vision is filled
Away on the fringes of light,
And again we two are together,
All alone in the night.
They tell me his mind is failing,
But I smile at idle fears;
He is only back with the children,
In the dear and peaceful years.

And still as the summer sunset
Fades away in the west,
And the wee ones, tired of playing,
Go trooping home to rest,
My husband calls from his corner,
"Say, love, have the children come?"
And I answer, with eyes uplifted,
"Yes, dear, they are all at home!"

To heal the wound a bee had made
Upon my Nellie's face,
Its honey to the part she laid,
And bade me kiss the place.

Pleased, I obeyed, and from the wound
Sucked both the sweet and smart;
The honey on my lips I found—
The sting went through my heart.

Miscellaneous.

THE WALPURGIS-NIGHT.

H. ZSCHOKKE.

THE TEMPTER.

I FOUND myself far from home on business at Prague. It was in April. However agreeable the diversion, I could not suppress my home-sickness. I longed for our little town, where my young wife had been impatiently expecting my return already for seven weeks, Since our wedding-day we had never before been so long separated. It is true, Fanny sent me letters every week; but these lines, so full of love and fondness and melancholy, were only oil to the fire. I wished Prague and St. Nepomuc just four-and-thirty miles behind me to the north-east.

To him, who has not a lovely little wife of two-and-twenty, charming as love, with two little loves playing around her, and who is not, after five years of married life, five hundred times more in love than on the day before his wedding, in vain do I talk of my home-sickness.

Enough, I thanked heaven when all my business was finished; and taking leave of my few acquaintances and friends, told my host to make out my bill. I was to set off on the morrow with the post.

In the morning the landlord appeared with a pretty heavy account. I had not ready money enough to pay it and the expenses of the journey too. I wished to change a note. I felt for my pocket-book, and sought it in all my pockets, and in all corners. It was gone. I felt very uncomfortably, for there were more than fourteen hundred dollars in bills in it, and that is no trifle under the sun.

It was in vain that I turned the room topsy-turvy—the pocket-book was not forthcoming.

"I might have known it," said I to myself. "Let a man be happy for one moment in his life, the devil is sitting behind the hedge ready to play him a trick. One ought not to rejoice in any thing in this world, and then should we have less vexation and misery. How often have I found it so!"

The pocket-book was either stolen or lost. I had it in my hands only the day before; I was accustomed to carry it in the breast-pocket of my coat. Fanny's letters were there too. I was certain that I had felt it the night before when undressing. How now were my bank-notes to be recovered? Whoever had got them could easily change them into gold and silver.

I began to swear, which, by the way, is not my besetting sin. Had the evil one gone about still, as in the good old times, although as a roaring lion, I should have struck a bargain with him on the spot. As my thoughts took this turn, there suddenly occurred to me the recollection of a figure, that I had seen at billiards about a week before, in a close red coat, and that then seemed to me like a prince of darkness in human shape. My blood actually ran cold at the remembrance; and yet I was so desperate, that I thought to myself, "I don't care, for my part! Were he here now he would be right welcome, if he would only bring me my pocket-book.'

Just then some one knocked at the door. "Holla!" thought I; "the tempter is not going to take a joke in earnest." I ran to the door; my mind was full of the plaguey red-coat, and I really believed the evil was in

And lo!—wonderful surprise!—when I opened the door, in stepped, with a slight nod, the very tempter I was thinking of.

A MORE PARTICULAR DESCRIPTION.

I MUST relate how and where I had made the acquaintance of this apparition, that the reader may not consider me a mere victim of my imagination.

I had gone one evening to a coffee-house or casino, where an acquaintance had once before carried me to play billiards. I hoped to find the latest newspapers. At a small table sat two gentlemen, engaged at chess. Some young men were sitting at a window, in lively conversation about ghosts and the nature of the human soul. A little elderly man, in a scarlet cloak, was walking up and down the room with his hands behind him. I took a glass of Dantzic cordial and the newspaper.

No one attracted my attention so much as the gentleman in scarlet. I forgot the newspaper and the Spanish war. There was, in his figure, in his movements, and in his features, something striking and repulsive which corresponded with his evident want of taste in dress. He was something under the usual size, but large-boned and broad-shouldered. He seemed to be between fifty and sixty years of age, and had a stoop in his walk. His coal-black hair hung thick about his head. His tawny complexion and his hawk's-nose and high cheek-bones gave him a very repelling look. For, while his features were cold and iron, his large eye sparkled like the eye of a young man; and yet one read in it no inspiration, no soul. There thought I is a born executioner, or grand inquisitor, or robber-captain, or gipsy-king. For a merejest that man could set cities on fire or see children stuck upon pikes. I would not like to travel alone in a wood with him He has never smiled in all his life.

There I was mistaken. He could smile. He listened to the young men at the window, and smiled. But, God be with us! what a smile! It chilled me like ice. The malice of the infernal regions seemed to mock one from every feature. "If that man there in the red coat is not Satan himself," thought I, "he must be Satan's brother." I looked involuntarily at his feet for the cloven foot, and, sure enough, he had one human foot like ours, but his left was a club foot in a laced boot: yet he did not limp with it, but walked softly about as if among egg-shells, which he did not care to break. He ought to have let himself be exhibited for ready money, to make all the Voltaires believers.

I entirely forgot the Spanish war. I held the newspaper before me, it is true but kept peeping over it at this remarkable figure.

As the red coat passed the chess-table one of the players said to his antagonist who seemed to be somewhat embarrassed, "You are lost now, beyond salvation." The red coat stopped a moment cast a glance upon the board, and remarked to the victor—"You are mistaken. In three moves you will be checkmated." The winner smiled haughtily; his opponent shook his head despairingly, and moved, at the third move the supposed victor was actually checkmated.

Whilst the chess-players were replacing their men, one of the young men at the window said warmly to the red-coat—"You smile, sir; our discussion appears to interest you; but your smile tells me that you are of a different opinion about the world and the Deity. Have you read Schelling?"

"Oh, yes!" said the red coat.

"And what does your smile mean?"

"Your Schelling is a sharp-minded poet who takes the tricks of his imagination for truth, because no one can oppose him, except with other fancy webs which only require still greater acuteness to weave them. It is with philosophers now-a-days as ever; the blind dispute about theory of colors, and the deaf about the laws of music. Alexander would willingly have been shipwrecked against the moon, in order to subdue it; and philosophers, dissatisfied in the sphere of reason, want to be superational."

So said the red coat; some disturbance arose. But he waited not, but took his hat and glided away.

I had not seen him since, but I did not forget the striking figure and the infernal physiognomy, and I was really frightened at the thought of dreaming about them.

And now he stood unexpectedly before me in my room!

THE TEMPTATION.

"Pardon, sir, if I disturb you," said he; "have I the honor to address Mr. Robert ——?"

"I am that person," I replied.

"How do you prove it?"

"Strange questions," thought I; "a police spy, without doubt." A half-torn letter lay on the table. I showed him my address on the envelope.

"Very good," said he, "but the name is a very common one; you may find it in every corner of Germany, Hungary and Poland. You must give me better vouchers; I have some business with you and have been directed hither."

"Sir," said I, "pardon me, I cannot now attend to business; I am just upon the point of leaving, and have yet a thousand things to see about. You must be mistaken in the person, for I am neither politician nor merchant.

He stared at me, and said—"Indeed!" He was then silent for awhile, and appeared about to depart; but began again: "You have, however, been doing some business here in Prague? Is not your brother upon the point of becoming bankrupt?"

I must have grown fire-red, for, as I believed, that was known to no soul in the world except my brother and myself. Here the tempter gave one of his malicious smiles again.

"You are again mistaken, sir," said I; "I have a brother, it is true, and more than one, but none that fears bankruptcy."

"Indeed," murmured the tempter, and his features again became hard and

"Sir," said I, somewhat sensitively, for I was not at all pleased that any one in Prague should know of my brother's circumstances, and I was afraid that the old fox would see into my play as he did into the game of chess at the coffee-house, "you have certainly been directed to the wrong person. I must beg pardon for requesting you to be brief; I have not a moment to lose."

"Have patience only a minute," replied he; "it is important for me that I should speak with you. You appear disquieted. Has anything disagreeable happened to you? You are a stranger here. I myself do not belong to Prague; and I see the city now for the first time for twelve years. But I have considerable experience. Confide in me. You look like an honest man. Do you need money?"

Then he smiled, or rather grinned again as if he wanted to buy my soul. His manner became ever more suspicious. Involuntarily I cast a glance at his club foot, and really I began to feel a superstitious dread. I was resolved in no case to commit myself with this suspicious gentleman, and said, "I need no money. Since you are so generous in your offers, sir, may I ask your name?"

"My name cannot be of much consequence to you," replied he; "that's nothing to the matter. I am a Mandeville. Does that name give more confidence?"

"A Man-devil," said I, in odd embarrassement, and knew not what to say or whether the whole thing were in jest or in earnest.

Just then some one knocked at the door. The landlord entered, and handed me a letter which had just come by post.

"Read your letter first," said the red coat, "and then we will talk further. The letter is, without doubt, from your lovely Fanny."

I was more startled than ever.

"Now do you know," continued the stranger with a grin: "do you not now know who I am, and what I want with you?"

It was upon my lips to say: "You are, sir, I verily believe, Satan himself and want my poor soul for a breakfast,' but I restrained myself.

"But further," added he, "you are going to Eger. Good! my way lies through that town. I start to-morrow. Will you take a place in my carriage?"

I thanked him, and said that I had already ordered a post-chaise.

At this he became disturbed, and said, "There is no getting at you,—but your Fanny, and the little Leopold and Augustus, I must get acquainted with in going through. Can you not guess who I am and what I want? The Deuce! Sir, I would render you a service. Do speak."

"Well," said I at last, "since you are a wizard, my pocket-book is missing. Advise me how I shall get it again."

"Boh! what signifies a pocket-book? Is there not something else——?"

"But in the pocket-book were important papers—more than fourteen hundred dollars in value. Advise me what I shall do if it is lost, and what, if stolen."

"How did the pocket-book look?"

"It had a silk cover, light green, with embroidery, and my initials wrought in flowers,—a piece of my wife's work.'

"Then the cover is worth more than the fourteen hundred dollars." With this he smiled upon me with his horrible familiarity, and then added, "we must see about it. What will you give me, if I supply your loss?"

At these words he looked at me as sharply and strangely as if he expected me to answer, I will make you a present of my soul; but as I remained embarrassed and silent, he plunged his hand into his pocket and drew out my pocket-book.

"There have you your jewel, the fourteen hundred dollars, and all," said he.

I was beside myself. "How came you by it?" cried I, tearing it open, and finding all safe.

"I found it yesterday afternoon, about four o'clock, upon the Moldau Bridge."

Right: just about that time I had crossed the bridge, had had the pocket-book in my hands, and had, as I tho't, put it into my pocket.

"It probably did not go into the pocket," said the red coat. "But I could not tell whether it had been lost by a person on foot or on horseback, before or behind me. I waited an hour upon the bridge, expecting to meet some one in search of it. As no one came, I went to my hotel. I read the contents of the letters, to discover the loser. An address gave me your name and residence here. So I have come now to you. I was here last evening but did not find you."

Good heavens! How one may be deceived by a man's physiognomy! I was ready to throw my arms around the neck of my Man-devil. I said the most obliging things to him. My joy was now as excessive as my previous vexation had been. But he would listen to none of my thanks. I vowed that as long as I lived I would remember him with gratitude to physiognomical impressions.

"Remember me to your beautiful Fanny,—a pleasant journey to you! we shall see each other again," said he, and departed.

THIS YEAR AND THE METHODISTS.—The year 1869 is destined to be most important in the annals of American Methodism. During the year the people will be called upon to decide whether or no they will accept the measures proposed to them by the General Conference for the admission of lay representatives to that assembly and the Annual Conferences. It is also an important fact that a new constituency has been created by the late General Conference; all members of the Church over twenty-one years of age, whether men or women, will be eligible to vote upon this question.

MR. PHILIP B. LYON, late a Methodist Minister, has been recommended for orders in the Church, in Illinois.

Extraordinary Exodus of Honey Bees.

ONE of the most remarkable occurrences that has ever come to our knowledge was related to us yesterday. Mr. James Broil, a farmer, who resides about seven miles from the city, on the River road, has for sometime past, been engaged extensively in raising honey bees, and with almost unprecedented success. He has lately rejoiced in as many as forty-five hives. A few mornings ago, however, Mr. Broil woke up to find his bees non est. They had "lit out" between two days, leaving no trace whatever of the point or region of country to which they had so unceremoniously migrated. There was not a solitary bee left to keep his lonely watch over the forty-five hives. As might be expected, Farmer Broil was left in considerable of a dilemma, and immediately consulted all the authorities at his command in relation to the peculiar habits and freaks of the bee tribe.

After reading through many volumes, it occurred to him that some of his neighbours might be able to explain the whys and wherefores of this "bounty-jumping" move on the part of his army of honey-makers. He accordingly made "bee-lines" for the residence of his nearest neighbor, to consult him on the singular problem. To his utter surprise, he ascertained that his friend, who is also a "beelst," had met met with the same loss in the same sudden manner, and was in the same perplexity as to the cause. They at once resolved on examining the hives, and it revealed to them the fact that each stand contained from sixty to seventy-five pounds of honey. This development led the two bee-raisers to seek for further information, and in their rounds, for a circuit of twenty-five miles, they found that every hive had been deserted about the same time, and all of them were left full of honey. The farmers in that region are unable to account for this mysterious disappearance of their bees, and many theories have been advanced, but up to this time the problem remains unsolved. The opinion of most of them is that the mildness of the weather up to so late a season caused this singular migration.—Louisville Democrat. Nov. 19.

THE LARGEST BLAST ON RECORD.—A short distance below Barryville, on the line of the Delaware & Hudson Canal, a large mass of rock has been for some time regarded with anxious eyes by the company. Fears were entertained that it might during the season of navigation be precipitated into the canal, an event which could not cost the corporation less than half a million of dollars. It was finally determined to take time by the forelock, and dislodge the mass in the winter season, and accordingly on Friday last, the thing was accomplished. Twenty-five kegs of powder having been deposited in a fissure and well tamped with sand, the match was applied, and at one blast the immense body known as "Hanging Rock" was hurled from its foundation. About half of the mass lodged in the bed of the canal and the balance crushing the tow-path like an egg-shell, made its way into the river. The rock was of the following dimensions: 97 feet long, 81 feet high and 32 feet thick. Containing upward of 9,000 cubic yards its weight was over twenty thousand tons—the largest mass, it is believed, ever dislodged at one blast. It is calculated that at an expense of about $10,000 the portion lying in the canal can be removed by the middle of March—some time before the possible opening of navigation.—Wayne Co., Herald.

DEAD MAN'S GULCH.—In California a miner had died in a mountain digging, and being much respected, his acquaintances resolved to give him a "square funeral," instead of putting the body in the usual way in any roughly made hole, and saying by way of services for the dead. "There goes another bully boy under! They sought the service of a miner who bore the reputation of having, at one time of his career, been "a powerful preacher in the States." And then, far Western fashion, all knelt around the grave while the extemporized parson delivered a prodigiously long prayer. The miners tired of this unaccostomed opiate, to while away the time, began fingering the earth, digger fashion, about the grave. Gradually looks were exchanged; whispering increased, until it became loud enough to attract the attention of the parson. He op

Bloomsburg Democrat.

BLOOMSBURG, PA.

FRIDAY MORNING, JAN. 29, 1869

☞ THE COLUMBIAN has the Largest Circulation of any paper published in Northern Pennsylvania, and is also a much larger sheet than any of its cotemporaries; and is therefore the best medium for advertising in this section of the State.

Auditor General's Report—1868

BUT the subject of postage, exposed in last week's COLUMBIAN, is not the only enormity; and we proceed to the detection of several others in their order.

In 1866 George Bergner furnished the Senate 31 copies Purdon's Digest at $363.00, and 31 copies Zeigler's Manual at $62.00.

In 1867, 36 copies Purdon,		$360 00
" 35 "	Zeigler,	70 00
In 1868, 35 "	Purdon,	350 00
" 40 "	Zeigler,	80 00

So that a Senator who remains there three years plunders 2 copies of Purdon ten dollars each, and 2 copies of Zeigler at $2.00 each. And Purdon can be bought of the publisher at a much less figure than Bergner charges the State.

The same system obtains in the House where Mr. Bergner provides 103 copies of Purdon and 103 copies of Zeigler at the same annual rates for 100 members. Except that in 1867 there were 112 copies of Purdon and 110 of Zeigler; and in 1868, 105 copies of Purdon and 110 of Zeigler for the 100 members. All of the members therefore get two copies of each, and some of them more than two.

It may be said these are small matters; only a hundred or two dollars. But when some of our farmers consider that 5% is the amount of their whole net profit from a year's labor, its importance is felt.

Now let us examine the item of pens, ink and paper, set down under the head of "stationery." The first thing under the head of "expenditures" is both for the Senate and House, as follows: "For pay of members, including mileage and stationery," and stands thus:

In 1866, Senate,	$ 35,818 50
" ouse,	107,746 60
In 1868, Senate,	36,547 40
" House,	107,308 80

And yet in 1868, there was paid to Purdon Digest Bergner, in addition to that included in the foregoing bills, for stationery, the sum of $3,905 25 for the Senate, and for the House, $7,265.04—exclusive of bills amounting to $4,000.00 more, set down as "contingent expenses, stationery, lights, labor &c."—making at the lowest figure over eleven thousand dollars for pens, ink and paper, for about one hundred days session not including the amount charged in first item, nor what of those matters may be included in the $4,000 above mentioned; but which if added, would swell the pen, ink and paper bill to more than fifteen thousand dollars a session.

No wonder you stare, fellow citizens, at such an exhibit. Of course two-thirds of it is stolen. A fellow from Tioga county, a loafer about the Capital, of which item something will be said hereafter, carried home with him a trunk full of stationery, enough to last him for years—and that's the way your money goes. Bad as all this is, more and worse remains behind, and shall be told, for the Radicals must make up their minds that this subject is

THE NEW COINAGE.—It is proposed to withdraw the present one, three and five cent pieces from circulation, and substitute a new and more elegant issue, to be composed of one-quarter nickle and three-quarters copper, the weight to be one and a half, three, and five grains respectively. The bill providing for the new coinage will also provide for the withdrawal of the ten cent notes in circulation, and the redemption of the nickles from a fund obtained from the profits arising from coinage, each piece being worth considerably less than its nominal value. The dies are being carefully prepared, and are said to be superior in beauty to any others of like denomination. The twenty-five and fifty cent paper currency will remain in circulation, it being found inexpedient to make coin of such size and weight as would represent those values. Indeed the paper is more convenient for common use than the silver coins formerly current.

ELECTION OF DEACONESSES IN PLYMOUTH CHURCH.—At the annual meeting of Plymouth church on Friday evening, one of the female members was voted for to fill the office of deacon. Mr. Beecher said that as soon as three deacons had been elected, he would offer a resolution providing for the election of three deaconesses, to assist the deacons in the performance of their duties as visitors of the sick and poor. This course was adopted, and the question was discussed, several members opposing Mr. Beecher. The resolution was adopted by almost a unanimous vote and Mrs. Morrill, Mrs. Fanning and Mrs. Walkeimer were chosen the first deaconesses of Plymouth Church.

For the benefit of our lady readers, we would state that the recent investigations of frauds in New York, have revealed the fact, that not only are adulterations practiced and short weight given in groceries, liquors, drugs, milk and coal, but also sewing silk which is soaked in a preparation of lead to give it false weight, and, even after that, the amount sold for one pound, averages but ten or twelve ounces, a swindle of from a quarter to five-eighths of each pound sold, whilst the spool silk is almost invariably short from one-quarter to one-fifth in length.

THE State of Delaware will, after the 4th of March next, be represented in the Senate of the United States by Jas. A. and Thos. F. Bayard—father and son. No case of the kind has ever before occurred, where two members of a family have represented the same State in the Senate at one time. James A. Bayard has already been Senator from Delaware for nearly fifteen years. His son has never before held any public position of importance.

FOR THE COLUMBIAN.

The New County.

UNDER the above caption in the COLUMBIAN of the 22nd inst, I find a notice of a new county laid before the people. Your notice is defective as you will hereafter observe, in several points. I will state briefly, the proceedings up to the present time. On the evening of the 11th of Jan. notice was given to citizens in and around Benton, that we would hold a meeting in the school house at Benton to take into consideration the propriety of forming a new county out of Lycoming, Columbia, Luzerne and a small part of Sullivan. We met on the eve of the 12th inst., and after proper consideration, took a vote which was unanimously in favor of a new county. At this meeting there was a committee appointed to give notice that a meeting would be held in Benton on Saturday the 16th inst., in order to obtain a full expression of the people's views. The committee gave the notice.

The morning of the 16th arrived and the sun rose clear, and heaven seemed to smile upon our effort. Between 9 and 10 o'clock reports began to circulate, that Bloom had sent a Lawyer into our midst to demolish the new county. This produced considerable consternation amongst us, as we had no idea what the feeling of the people would be, in the surrounding country; this report was soon succeeded by another that he was here to rent an office, and that an editor from the same locality wanted to start a newspaper.

We replied to this that we did not want editors or lawyers as yet; that the county was not struck off by the Legislature. By 10 o'clock the sleds and sleighs began coming into Benton, and by two o'clock the school house was filled; a large number found no seats to accommodate them.

After due consideration of the subject we took a vote which resulted almost unanimously in favor of a new county; only two votes against. As the location of county seat, Cambra, Columbus, Stillwater and Benton are to prominent points. The Comaissioners appointed by the Governor have the sole power of locating the county seat. The objects are to improve this back country and create a home market.

We claim that we have to travel an unnecessary distance to Court—we claim we can erect our county buildings and pay for them within five years without much increase of tax, and after that period our taxes will be less than now.

Our county will contain over 400 square miles, and over 2,000 voters.

Will Columbia County allow us to secede? Or in other words will the people in the balance of the county sustain us in cutting off a portion of it to form a new county?

NEW COUNTY.

Benton, Jan. 25, '69.

FOR THE COLUMBIAN.

A New County.

SIR: The project of a new county to be erected out of parts of Columbia, Luzerne, Sullivan and Lycoming, hatched in Williamsport for the purpose of bringing into market some wild lands, is a very ill considered and absurd one. There is not one valid reason in its favor. There are many against it. First, the constitutional objection of territory; Second, of a vote of the people of Columbia and probably of Lycoming also, more than one-tenth of the population being taken; Third, the expense of inaugurating a new county, and getting it in operation, and lastly the utter lack of any necessity for a new county in the locality proposed.

There are only about half a dozen counties in the State smaller than Columbia. She does not now contain the constitutional number of square miles. No county can be formed with less than four hundred. Can a county have territory taken from ft, leaving it with less than four hundred; or if it have less, can anything be cut from it? Columbia county contains only three hundred and forty square miles, and Sullivan county only four hundred and twenty, according to the Legislative Hand-book of 1868. Where then is the territory to come from which is to make a new county, which must contain four hundred square miles?

It seems to me, Mr. Editor, that there is a large nigger in that woodpile.

GERMANICUS.

THE Sullivan Democrat has placed at the head of its columns as its candidate for Governor, the name of Hon. C. R. Buckalew. Speaking of the fact it says:

We have been desired by many citizens to place the name of Hon. Charles R. Buckalew at the head of our columns as our next Candidate for Governor.

As this is the highest position within the gift of the State, it would seem fitting that it should be occupied by "Pennsylvania's favorite son."

In compliance with the request of our citizens, and in accordance with our individual preference, and fulfilling what we believe to be the wishes of the Democracy of this portion of the State, we cordially comply with the request and hope to see the expression of the preferences from other portions of the State.

FOR six years, Pennsylvania has been represented in the Senate of the United States by Hon. Charles R. Buckalew. He has been a patient, able and faithful Senator. In the discussion of the many important questions that occupied Congress during his term, he has borne a conspicuous part, and has more than once succeeded in impressing the radical majority with the soundness of his views. His abilities are acknowledged by his opponents, and his integrity is unimpeachable. Let the Radicals match him, and no Democrat will complain.—Patriot & Union.

THE following bill has been offered in the State Legislature:

"That no interest, nor policy of law, shall exclude a party from being witness in any civil proceedings; but this shall not alter the law understood and practiced in the courts of this State, so as to allow husband and wife to testify against each other, nor counsel to testify to the confidential communications of his client; and when one party is a witness, and the other party is dead, the former shall not testify to any admissions made by the latter.

VOTE.—On Monday last, the workingmen of the Mahanoy Valley voted at the different collieries whether or not they would go to work at the terms proposed by the operators. The vote was counted at Mahanoy City yesterday, and our informant states, stood as follows:

To go to work at reduction	283
Against going to work	770

SKEDADLED.—A rather decent looking young man, named Bryson, came along last week, and being a saddler by trade, applied to Mr. Eli Ager of this place and got employment. From all that Mr. A. could see, his jour promised to be in every way desirable—both steady and temperate. About the latter part of the week Mr. Ager having occasion to go to Bloomsburg, left the young man at work and in charge of the shop. Judge of his surprise on his return on Monday last to find his shop closed and Mr. Journowhere to be found. On entering he found himself minus a $45 set of harness which had evidently gone on the same train. A letter which was found in the shop read about this wise: "Mr. Ager-when you receive this I will be in York State where I belong." (not unless he should be in prison.) Bryson professed to hail from Lewistown, Juniata county, and has probably gone there instead of to York State. He is about 28 years of age, has dark hair, black chin whiskers and moustache and stands about 5 feet 8 inches in his stockings. Look out for him.—Pittston Gazette.

THE WORKING MEN AND THE TAXES.—Once in a while there appears in Mrs. Susan B. Anthony's paper, The Revolution, a stinging paragraph in reference to the policy of the Radicals. This is one of her latest and best:

"The laboring masses have one privilege left. They can get up at Five-Twenty in the morning, and work till Ten-Forty at night, to earn money to pay Seven-Thirty interest to the Bondholder. The Bond-holders get up at Ten-Forty, take dinner and wine at Seven-Thirty, enjoy themselves until Ten-Forty at night, when they retire chuckling over the fact that they have no road or state taxes to pay; and they offer thanks to the Radical thieves in Congress for the privileges they enjoy over the laboring millions. Can't you see it?"

IT is the intention of the Ladies of Saint Paul's church of this town, to hold a Fair & Festival in Brower's new building during Court week. Refreshments of all kinds will be provided during the day and evening. A handsome chair suitable for a lodge room will be voted for, and the lodge receiving the greatest number of votes will have its room adorned by the same.

This effort is made by the ladies in aid of the new church building fund. They should be in every way encouraged and assisted and we trust a large attendance will show that their work is appreciated by the public. Success to the worthy enterprise.

EXHUBERANT HEALTH

Is a blessing vouchsafed to few. Even those who have been favored by nature with strong constitutions and vigorous frames are apt to neglect the precautions necessary to preserve these precious endowments. Indeed as a rule, the more healthy and robust a man is the more liberties he is inclined to take with his own physique. It is some consolation to the naturally weak and feeble to know that they can be so invigorated and built up proper use of the means which science has placed at their disposal, as to have a much better chance of long life and exemptions from disease and pain, than the most athletic of their fellows who are foolish enough to suppose themselves invulnerable, and act accordingly.

It is not too much to say that more than half the people of the civilized world need an occasional tonic, to enable them to support the latra in upon their bodies and minds, which the fast life of this restless age occasions. In fact, a pure wholesome, unexciting tonic is the grand desideratum of the busy millions, and they have the article in HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS. It is a staminal medicine, i, e., it imparts permanent strength to weak systems and invigorates delicate constitutions. Its reputation and its sales have steadily increased. Competitive preparations have been introduced ad libitum, and as far as the public is concerned ad nauseam, in the hope of rivaling it; but they have all either perish in the attempt, or been left far in the rear. It has been the great MEDICAL SUCCESS of the present century and, it is quite certain that no proprietary medicine in this country is as widely known, or as generally used.

Ten lightning presses, running incessantly (Sundays excepted,) the whole year through, barely supply the demand for the Illustrated Almanac, in which the nature and uses of the preperation are set forth, the circulation now being over five millions a year.

BLOOMSBURG, FRIDAY, JAN. 29, 1869.

CORNELIUS BELLAS has sold his house and lot in Orangeville to William DeLong for the sum of $800.

THE winter so far has been very open and pleasant. The danger is that the fruit trees will be injured by the premature warmth.

WE have made arrangements with the bank of this place to receive on deposit all such sums as may be brought or sent us during Court by our subscribers.

TIN SMITHS take notice! The entire stock, tools, machinery and fixtures of a tin shop for sale cheap. Apply before February 9th to C. SMITH, Orangeville, Penn'a.

NEXT week promises to be an exciting one in this place. The trial of the men charged with Mr. Rea's murder will probably more than occupy the first week.

A ONE-HALF interest in the Williamsport Standard is offered for sale, on account of the declining health of the proprietor and severe affliction in his family.

THE new Court House in Danville is expected to cost about fifty thousand dollars. Building is excessively expensive. Blessed are those who have no houses to build.

THE latest fashions can be found at the new store of Miller & Wolf, Main St. below Iron. Complete assortment of the very latest and best styles of Dry Goods, Groceries etc., just received. Get them whilst they are new. *

PUBLIC LECTURE.—Prof. J. W. Ferree will deliver a lecture in the hall of the Bloomsburg Literary Institute, on Wednesday evening, Feb. 3,at 7 o'clock Subject, Astronomy—illustrated with scenes from the magic lantern. Lecture free.

OUR cotemporary boasts of the amount of its job work last week. He knew very well that the condition ofour office was such that we could do nothing of the kind. We are now prepared to go in, and from this date will count figures, if he desires.

PATRICK HESTER, of Northumberland county, who has become implicated in the Rea murder gave himself up on Thursday last, and was lodged in jail. He alleges that he surrendered himself first to Judge Jordan, and by his advice came here.

IF you want to help a paper always pay your subscription in advance. Send the editor at least one subscription beside your own, and often it may happen that you can pick up half a dozen. Such things make his heart light; they make him work with new grit; in short, they make him happy.

WE have on hand and for sale the "World" Almanac for 1869. It contains full statistics of the late elections, a complete account of the Impeachment Trial, acts and resolutions of the 40th Congress, and all of the historical and political events of the year. Price 20 cents.

THANKS.—The kind friends of my charge have kindly remembered myself and wife in a donation visit.—Among the most valuable presents,was a sleigh. All the presents amounted to $172. Many thanks to you all, kind friends. J. M. RICE.

Espy, Jan. 22, 1869.

WE publish this week two communications on the subject of the New County. One favouring it, and one opposing it. We are of the opinion that the constitution fixes the case adversely to the project; and therefore do not now feel called upon to do more than give a vehicle to the free expression of opinion.

WE have received the second number of Capt. Reid's new Magazine "Onward," and it is decidedly better even than the first. It contains a number of thrilling stories, and is well illustrated. Published by Carleton, New York, at $3.50 a year. It is well worth the money. Capt. Reid is widely known as a writer of romances of unusual merit, and many of the articles in the new magazine are from his brilliant pen.

PROF. CULLIS delivered the third lecture of the course on last Monday evening. "The Idol of Modern Times" proving to be a Temperance Lecture he delivered one in its place on "Young Men."

Mr. Cullis took an unfair advantage not only of the audience but of the Committee in obtruding his political opinions upon them. We have advocated a course of lectures from a sense of public duty; but do not propose to pay our money, or advise our patrons to do so, to hear ourselves abused.

HOW TO COOK A BEEFSTEAK.—In traveling through our County we have found that our people can make incomparable buck-wheat cakes, but that many of them cannot cook a steak. For the general good we give the following recipe:

Let the frying-pan being wiped very dry be put upon the stove, and let it become very hot. In the meantime cut the steak—if it chance to be much the better—pepper and salt it when you lay it on the hot, dry pan, and instantly cover as tight as possible. When the raw flesh touches the heated surface, of course it seethes and sputters, but in a few seconds it becomes loosened and adheres to it, but in a few seconds it becomes loosened and juicy. Every half minute turn the steak; but be careful to keep it as much as possible under cover. When nearly done lay a small piece of butter upon it, and if you want much gravy add a tablespoonful of strong good coffee. In three minutes from the time the steak first goes into the pan it is ready for the table. This method of cooking makes the most delicious, delicately broiled steak, full of juice, yet retaining the healthy beefy flavor, that a Mary John Bull could require. The same method may be applied to mutton chops, only they require a little longer cooking to prevent them from being rare. An excellent gravy may be made for them by adding a little cream, thickened with a pinch of flour, into which, when off the fire and partly cool, stir in the yolk of an egg well beaten."

NO. XCIII.

THE FALLS OF ST. ANTHONY.

AN INDIAN TRADITION.

THE scene of the following story is in the far-famed territory now comprised in the State of Minnesota. The territory and the state were named from the river Minnesota, in the beautiful language of the Dakotas, the "sky-tinted," and in years gone by, it was the home of many a traveller and the theme of many a traveller's story. In the usual course of settlement we have, although but lately, come to a knowledge of its history and resources.

And yet, although apparently so lately known to many of our own people, this region is an old country to many of the early adventurers from Europe. In 1658, over two hundred years ago, Father Menard, a devoted Jesuit missionary, was lost in the wilderness, and his cassock and breviary were long preserved as "medicine" charms by the Dakotas, once a very formidable tribe in the North-west. In 1680, Hennepin, a name remembered with love and reverence reached the Mississippi, and gave the foaming waters of St. Anthony's Falls their baptismal name, in honor of his patron-saint.

Among the Indians who dwelt within its boarders may be mentioned the Dakotas, Ojibway, Shianu, Ausinabwaun, Winebago, Ioway, Ozaukie, and Musquakie. The Dakotas, known also as Sioux, were a numerous and powerful band of warriors,and had encamped on prairies east of the Mississippi, vagrants between the head waters of Lake Superior and the Falls of St. Anthony.

Between them and the Chippewas existed a hereditary warfare, as terrible and fierce and sanguinary as any on record. They spared neither age nor sex, and all the country of the upper Mississippi bears witness to the mightiness of the struggle.

But their wars are over, their battles are fought, their victories are won; no more do the trusty warriors gather round the council-fires to plan the surprise and the attack; but a little longer even in the forests of the farthest west, will the whoop of the Indian disturb the silence of nature; he will have departed for ever, and the pale-face will have taken up the late deserted hunting-grounds, and the sound of the axe, the puff of the steamboat, and the whistle of the locomotive, with all the various sounds of civilization, will have rendered still more true the prophecy:

"Westward the star of empire takes its way."

But the races of men which have left us, have stamped upon many localities imperishable names, connected in many instances, with some romantic or tragic incidents, awakening the attention of the traveller, the imagination of the romancist, or the melancholy muse of the poet. Connected with one of the most romantic spots in the territory is a story, whose details lend still greater charms to the already celebrated Falls of St. Anthony.

These falls are two thousand and seventy-eight miles from the mouth of the Mississippi, about eight miles from the flourishing town of St. Paul; and there is even at the falls a village of the same name, numbering several thousand inhabitants. There is nothing more beautiful in the western country than the falls of St. Anthony; and they deserve, in its fullest extent the musical appellation given them by roving and warlike Dakotas—"Minne-rara," the "laughing-water." From many of these places civilization strips the robe of romance, and doubtless in a few years, as is already to some extent the case, the "laughing-water" will be chained to some machinery, and the noise and bustle of business will prevent the sojourner from seeing the sights which were familiar at a former period.

Let us haste, then, and to this brief sketch add the Legend of the Falls, while yet the ancient ground may be traced, and the shadowy form be seen.

An Indian of the Dakota nation had united himself, in early life, to a youthful female named Ampota Sapa, which signifies the "Dark Day," with whom he had lived happily,enjoying every felicity of which their natures were capable. Two children were the pledges of their affection, and seemed to bind the parents together with still more tender ties. The young Dakotan was a brave man and an active hunter, and his reputation had drawn about him many families of his tribe. The deference they paid him awakened ambition in his heart, and at the solicitation of friends he consented, in view of his growing honors and importance, to take a second wife, comforting himself with the assurance that it was to relieve the first from the accumulating drudgery,which the numerous visitors and friends he was drawing about him would occasion.

Fearing, however, that the consent of his first wife could not be obtained, he determined to marry first, and obtain permission afterward. Upon mentioning the subject to Ampota, she besought him tearfully, by all their former love and happiness, by all their recollections of the past, by his affection for their children, to abandon a project so filled with unpleasant consequences, and so pregnant with unhappiness. Nothing could induce Ampota to give her consent. She declared that she was equal to the task of preparing for all of his guests,and that it was not at all necessary that another need be joined with her in the labor to which she had consecrated herself.

Finding all persuasion useless he informed her that the act was already consummated,and that she must at once conclude to receive his new wife in their wigwam. Distressed beyond measure at the information, and believing that she had now nothing to live for, her husband's love being withdrawn, she watched an opportunity, and with her two children escaped to her father. In some of their journeyings, the party to which her father's family belonged, encamped near the falls. In the morning when they left it, she lingered near the spot, then launched her light canoe, and having entered it with her children paddled down the stream, singing her death-song. The cataract presently drowned her voice, and as the canoe rapidly neared the precipice, it could be perceived for a moment enveloped in spray, but never afterwards was a trace of the frail bark, or any of its passengers, seen.

Yet it is asserted by the Indians that often in the morning, a voice has been heard to sing a doleful strain along the edge of the falls; and that so far as the words can be distinguished, the burden of the song is the inconstancy of the love of man. Nay, it is even said that her spirit has been seen wandering near the spot, as in life, accompanied by her children; and the mimic boat again glides down the rapids, passes over the falls, and disappears.

'Tis morn, and from the reddening east
The joyous day begins to flow,
The stars grow dim, and in the west
The clouds with streaks of daylight glow.
Each blade of grass, each shrub appears
To bow its tender head in tears;
But as the day-star rises high,
Full quickly does the illusion fly;
For what seemed once a tear,seems now
A gem to deck a queenly brow,
And glitters in the morning beam
Like diamond of the purest stream.
The river sparkles in the light,
And seems all joyous and all bright;
Laughing as though upon the earth,
There were no songs but those of mirth.
Would it were so! but tales of joy
Need, as a relish, some alloy;
And hearts are better for an hour
Spent where grim Death has shown his power.
Where every clod the foot may stir
Lies o'er some long-dug sepulchre.
And who could wish a brighter grave,
St. Anthony! than thy sparkling wave?
Who that has trod the shore so green—
Has heard thy roar, thy rainbow seen,
Has watched thy waters' beauteous play,
As rushing on they near the brink,
And seem a moment there to stay,
Glistening in light before they sink—
Has not wished that his lot were cast,
So he might sleep in thee at last?
Say, couldst thou wish a prouder bed?
Green moss shall circle round thy head,
And neatly carved is many a cell
Where spirits of the water dwell;
And glad they welcome those who go
To revel in their joys below,
And there forget their former woe,
Their love and hate,their friend and foe.
And they will braid thy flowing hair
With many a diamond rich and rare.
And gems as sparkling as thine eye,
Deep in their caves unnumbered lie.
Say who could wish a brighter grave,
St. Anthony! than thy sparkling wave?

'Tis morn, and near the Falls are seen
A band in peaceful garb arrayed,
With trusty bow and hatchet keen,
And skins and spoils of peaceful raid.
No war-paint streaks the swarthy cheek,
No startling whoop rings o'er the hills;
Bright Minne-rara seems to speak
A tone the fierce Dacota thrills.
It tells him of the day of rest
That followed Allacoosa's flight,
When all his wrongs had been redressed,
And nine scalps graced his belt at night
It may be, that he dreams how here
He sought the maiden of his heart,
How the next moon, with gow sincere,
He meets her, never more to part;
And now with winter store returns
To her for whom his bosom burns,
With various skins and shining fur,
The best and warmest culled for her.
For think not that the savage breast
With love's sweet passion ne'er is blest
True-hearted are Dacota's maids;
Their virgin lips warm kisses seal;
No change their constant mind invades;
Time weakens not their early zeal.

The band has gone, and lonely now
And wilder far becomes the scene;
The smouldering fires are burning low
The only traces left to show
Where late the camp had been.
Stay, see! upon that pleasant seat,
Built as a cool and calm retreat,
Beside that sparkling rill,
Sits one, as passionless and still,
As if the goddess of the wood
With spells and charms had her subdued,
To guard this awful solitude.
Vacant that eye which once could tell
The story of the heart full well;
And all unbound that raven hair
Which once was decked with jewels rare;
A fairy girl and beauteous boy
Unnoticed play about her feet.
Ah! what can give a mother joy,
If not her childrens' smile to greet?
And now she takes by either hand
The little prattlers standing by,
And long she gazes as they stand,
Into each laughing eye.
This is a sturdy boy,
Five summers scarce he's told;
His father's pride and joy,
The young, and free, and bold.
Already had his eagle eye
Flashed at the stories of his sire,
His counterpart in spirit high,
In eloquence and fire.
The other was a lovely child;
It gazed into her face and smiled;
Most sweetly did its dark eye beam,
Like fairy in a poet'r dream—
Its raven tresses loosely hung,
And to the morning breeze were flung,
While in its folds were wrought with care
Such trinkets as the Indians wear.

Now move they slowly to the shore
Where rides a tiny bark-canoe,
'Tis music, Minne-rara's roar—
A fitting music to the deed
Ampota Sapa seeks to do;
Will not her woman's heart recede?
Will not the wife at last repent?
Perhaps the mother will relent?
No! see her place her laughing child
Upon the water, foaming wild;
Eager the boy springs to her side,
His bright eye sparkling in its pride;
She quick the frail canoe untied,
And, seated by her children's side,
With buskined feet she spurned the shore
And calmly plied the trusty oar.
A moment, and her gentle eye
Conversed with river, earth, and sky,
Turned on her babes a last long look,
Which half her constant purpose shook;
Then fixed on vacant space, rehearsed
The woes and wrongs her life had cursed.
"I perceive thy form, O my mother!
In the mists that rise from the water;
And I come to the far spirit shore,
Where deceit nor unhappiness reign.
Our age is not measured by winters
Whose snows on our heads have descended;
But why sorrows whose traces are left
On our hearts—Ampota has suffered—
Her endearments pall on her husband—
No longer beloved or caressed,
Another now rests on the bear-skin,
And sleeps on the bosom of her Lord.
Who is there to morn for Ampota,
To provide for the babes of her joy?
What wigwam affords her a shelter?"
I come to thee, then, O my mother!
I bring thee my pledges of love,
Receive me again as in childhood,
And lead me where pain is no more.
As wildly she her death song sung,
Her babes in silent terror clung
About her knees—but none could save
The boat from Minne-rara's wave.
A moment—it is faintly seen
Among the spray that rolls between;
Another—and 'tis fiercely tost—
It hastens on—'tis lost—'tis lost.
Down, down it goes, and no one there
Shall sing a requiem, say a prayer;
None shall disturb the bones that lie
Down where the waters meet the sky,
Entombed in moss, where spirits play
Who shun the grosser light of day,
And sport within a twilight land
Which eye of mortal never scanned.
No masses for her rest were said—
No exorcist her spirit laid—
For oft is seen along the bank
At early morn, in clothing dank,
The figure of an Indian maid.
One child upon her bosom laid;
And tripping sprightly by her side,
Her only son, her joy, her pride.
A magic boat is on the shore,
And slow they enter it once more;
See through the mist they calmly glide,
A shadow on the river's breast—
Now lost, now seen upon the tide
The phantom boat floats by unblest.
You see each form of yielding air
The mother, boy, and child are there,
And as they pass, in mournful voice
She sings the husband of her choice;
In lively strains she tells the tale
Of mutual love in flowry vale:
Of pledges oft and oft renewed
By purling brook or shady wood;
Of pleasure love will always give;
Of hope, on which we mostly live;
Of happiness that still must flow,
When truthful hearts are joined below;
And then, in'wild lamenting strain,
Man's fickle love and cold disdain.

Meanwhile, the boat speeds swiftly by;
Again it nears the dizzy brink
Where down the cat'ract will and high,
The sparkling waters sink.
It rests a moment, and no more,
One bound, one plunge, and all is o'er;
Quick close the waves above her head,
And moss and stones entomb the dead!

WHERE can I buy the best and cheapest Dry Goods, Groceries, and Household Goods? Why at C. C. Marr's of course,on Main street, near Iron; he always keeps the best and at reasonable rates. He is agent for the new Gothic Burner, the latest and most valuable yet invented. *

SWINDLING is practiced every day by those unscrupulous rascals who sell the public worthless clothing at exorbitant rates. The only way to avoid this danger is to buy of honest and reliable men. David Lowenburg, so long and favorably known to our citizens can and will furnish you with the best of goods at as low prices as the market will allow. *

BLOOMSBURG cannot complain of the need of a first-class merchant tailor, as long as our friend Chemberlin is "to the fore." No better goods can be found than those he offers, nor can they be made in a more suitable and workmanlike manner. He has a fine stock of seasonable goods at very reasonable rates. He deserves the success which he has obtained. Our readers should call on him. *

The Good Woman.

He began saying many sweet things to her. She listened to him with a pleasure which she had never before experienced, and she responded to them in a simple manner, full of grace. Finfin saw that it was getting late, and the fawn having arrived with Lirette's letter, he told his sister it was time to go home. "Come, brother," said she to the young Prince, giving him her hand, "come with us into the House of Roses." For as she believed Finfin to be her brother, she thought that every one who was handsome, like him, must be her brother also.

The young Prince did not require much pressing to follow her. Finfin threw on the back of his fawn the game he had shot, and the handsome Prince carried the bow and the game-bag of Mirtis.

In this order they arrived at the House of Roses. Lirette came out to meet them. She gave the Prince a smiling reception, and turning towards Mirtis, "I am delighted," said she, "that you have had such good sport."

They went all together to seek the Good Woman, to whom the Prince made known his high birth. She paid due attention to so illustrious a guest, and gave him a handsome apartment. He remained two or three days with her, and this was long enough to complete his conquest by Mirtis, according to Finfin's request to his little almond.

Meanwhile, the suite of the Prince had been much surprised at his absence. They had found his horse, and they believed that some frightful accident had befallen him. They sought him everywhere, and the wicked King, who was his father, was in a great fury at their not being able to find him. The Queen, his mother, who was very amiable, and sister of the King whom her husband had cruelly murdered, was in an inconceivable state of grief at the loss of her son.

In her extreme distress, she sent secretly in search of Madam Tu-tu, who was an old friend of hers, but whom she had not seen for some time, because the King hated her, and had done her much injury with a person she dearly loved. Madam Tu-tu arrived, without being perceived, in the cabinet of the Queen. After they had embraced each other affectionately—for there is not much difference between a Queen and a Fairy, they having almost equal power, —the Fairy Tu-tu told her that she would very soon see her son. She begged her not to make herself uneasy, and not to be at all distressed at anything that might happen—that either she was very much deceived, or she could promise her a delight which was quite unexpected by her, and that she would be one day the happiest of creatures.

The King's people made so many inquiries for the Prince, and sought him with so much care, that at length they found him at the House of Roses.

They led him back to the King, who scolded him brutally, as though he were not the most beautiful youth in the world. He remained very sad at the Court of his father, and thinking of his beautiful Mirtis. At length his grief was so visible on his countenance, that he was obliged to take his mother into his confidence, who consoled him extremely. "If you will mount your beautiful palfrey," said he, "and come to the House of Roses, you will be charmed with what you will see." The Queen consented willingly, and took her son with her, who was enchanted at seeing his dear mistress again.

The Queen was astonished at the great beauty of Mirtis, and also at that of Lirette and Finfin. She embraced them with as much tenderness as if they had been all her own children, and conceived an immense friendship from that moment for the Good Woman. She admired the house, the garden, and all the curiosities she saw there. When she returned, the King desired her to give an account of her journey, she did so naturally, and he took a great fancy to go also and see the wonders which she described. His son asked permission to accompany him; he consented with a sullen air, for he never did anything with a good grace. As soon as he saw the House of Roses he coveted it; he paid not the least attention to the charming inhabitants of this beautiful place, and, by way of commencing to take possession of their property, he said that he would sleep there that evening.

The Good Woman was very much vexed at such a resolution. She heard an uproar, and saw a disorder in her household, which frightened her. "What has become," cried she, "of the happy tranquillity which I once enjoyed here! The least breath of fortune destroys all the calm of life!"

She gave the King an excellent bed, and withdrew into a corner of the dwelling with her little family. The wicked King went to bed, but found it impossible to go to sleep, and opening his eyes, he saw at the foot of his couch a little old woman, who was not half a yard high, and about as broad; she had great spectacles, which covered all her face, and she made frightful grimaces at him. The base are generally cowards. He was in a terrible fright, and felt at the same time a thousand points of needles pricking him all over. In this tormenting state of body and mind, he was kept awake the entire night, and made a great noise about it. The King stormed and swore in language which was not at all consistent with his dignity. "Sleep, sleep, sire," said the partridge, "or let us sleep; if the condition of royalty is so full of anxiety, I prefer being a partridge to being king." The King was more than ever alarmed at these words; he commanded them to seize the partridge, which roosted in a porcelain vase; but she flew away at this order, beating his face with her wings. He still saw the same vision, and felt the same prickings; he was dreadfully frightened, and his anger became more furious. "Ah!" said he, "it is a spell of this sorceress, whom they call the Good Woman. I will rid myself of her and all her race by putting them to death!"

He got up, not being able to rest in bed; and as soon as day broke, he commanded his guards to seize all the innocent little family, and fling them into dungeons. He had them dragged before him, that he might witness their despair. These charming faces, bedewed with tears, touched him not; on the contrary, he felt a malignant joy at the sight. His son, whose tender heart was rent by so sad a spectacle, could not turn his eyes upon Mirtis without an agony which nothing could exceed. A true lover, on such occasions, suffers more than the person beloved.

They seized these poor innocents, and were leading them away, when the young Finfin, who had no arms with which to oppose these barbarians, took the ribbon on a sudden from his neck. "Little almond," cried he, "I wish that we were out of the power of the King!" "And with his greatest enemies, my dear cherry!" continued Lirette. "And that we might take away with us the handsome Prince, my medlar!" added Mirtis. They had hardly uttered these words when they found themselves with the Prince, the partridge, and the fawn, all together in a car, which rising with them in the air, they soon lost sight of the King and the House of Roses.

Mirtis had no sooner expressed her wish than she repented of it. She knew well that she had inconsiderately allowed herself to be carried away by an impulse of which she was not the mistress; therefore, during all the journey, she kept her eyes cast down, and felt much abashed. The Good Woman gave her a severe glance. "My daughter," said she, "you have not done well to separate the Prince from his father; however unjust he may be, he ought not to leave him." "Ah, Madam," replied the Prince, "do not complain that I have the happiness of following you. I respect the King, my father; but I should have left him a hundred times had it not been for the virtue, the kindness, and tenderness of the Queen, my mother, which have always detained me.

As he finished these words, they found themselves in front of a beautiful palace, where they alighted and were received by Madam Tu-tu. She was the most lovely person in the world —young, lively, and gay. She paid them a hundred compliments, and confessed to them that it was she who had given them all the pleasures which they had enjoyed in their lives, and had also bestowed on them the cherry, the almond, and the medlar, the virtues of which were at an end, as they had now arrived in her dominions. Then, addressing the Prince in private, she told him that she had heard speak a thousand times of the annoyance he had met with from his father; but, in order that he should not attribute to her any evil that might hereafter befal the King, she frankly admitted she had played him some tricks, but that was the full extent of her vengeance.

Farmer's Department.

SHOULD ORCHARDS BE PLOUGHED.—The most plausible argument that can be advanced against the practice of ploughing the ground around fruit-trees of any kind, is the fact that every tree will send out a system of coronal roots just beneath the surface of the soil, which will again throw out branch rootlets in a horizontal direction, all of which will continue to multiply until the entire surface of the ground is completely occupied with open mouths of hungry rootlets, ready to drink in the first supply of nourishment that is dissolved by the falling showers. It is as much a legitimate habit of a fruit-tree to provide a close network of roots, near the surface of the ground, as it is to send other roots downward into the earth. Every fruit tree, most deciduous, ornamental and timber trees, as well as evergreens of all kinds, when growing on dry upland, will send down a long tap-root, for the purpose of reaching moisture, to supply the growing branches during a dry period in the growing. Let the tap-root be removed, and the tree will make but slow growth, because its habit has been interfered with. The same is true touching the upper system of coronal, or second roots, near the surface of the ground. These are, what are properly called, the feeders of the parent stem. They should not be mutilated nor removed, as they usually are cut off and torn away by the plough. All vegetation should be kept down around fruit-trees as far from the body as the extremity of the longest branches, by hoeing the surface over frequently, or by the application of a few inches in depth of a mulch. Fruit-trees may bear well when every coronal root has been removed with the plough; but if those roots had not been removed, the crop of fruit would have been more abundant.

JUDGING HORSES BY APPEARANCES.—I offer the following suggestions, the result of my close observations and long experience: If the color be light, sorrel or chestnut, his feet, legs and face white—these are marks of kindness. If he is broad and full between the eyes, he may be depended on as a horse for being trained to anything; as respects such, the more kindly you treat them the better you will be treated in return. Nor will a horse of this description stand a whip if well fed. If you want a safe horse, avoid one that is dish faced. He may be so far gentle as not to scare, but he will have (comparatively) much go ahead in him to be safe with everybody. If you want a fool, but a horse of great bottom, get a deep bay with not a white hair about him. If his face is a little dished, so much the worse. Let no man run such a horse who is not an expert rider; they are always tricky and unsafe. If you want one that will never give out, never buy a large overgrown one. A black horse cannot stand the heat, nor a white one the cold. If you want a gentle horse, get one with more or less white about the head, the more the better. Selections thus made are of great docility and gentleness.—Exchange.

BONED TURKEY.—This is a favorite dish and may be thus prepared: Boil a Turkey in as little water as may be, until the bones can be easily separated from the meat. Remove all the skin; slice, mixing together the light and dark parts. Season with salt and pepper. Take the liquid in which the turkey was boiled, having kept it warm, and pour it on the meat; mix it well. Shape it like a loaf of bread, wrap in cloth, and press with a heavy weight for a few hours. When served up, it is cut in thin slices. Chicken can be preserved in the same way.

ALL humane persons should have their horses sharp shod in slippery weather. We noticed the fall of several valuable quadrupeds, occasioned by inattention to this matter.

HOOFLAND'S

GERMAN BITTERS.

HOOFLAND'S GERMAN BITTERS,

AND

Hoofland's German Tonic.

Prepared by Dr. C. M. Jackson,

PHILADELPHIA, PA.

The Great Remedies

FOR ALL DISEASES OF THE LIVER, STOMACH, or DIGESTIVE ORGANS.

Hoofland's German Bitters

Is compounded of the pure juices, (or as they are medicinally term ed, Extracts) of Roots, Herbs and Barks, making a preparation, highly concentrated, and entirely free from Alcoholic admixture of any kind.

Hoofland's German Tonic,

Is a combination of all the ingredients of the Bitters, with the purest quality of Santa Cruz Rum, Orange, etc., making one of the most pleasant and agreeable remedies ever offered to the public.

Those preferring a Medicine free from Alcoholic admixture, will use

Hoofland's German Bitters.

In cases of nervous depression, when some alcoholic stimulus is necessary,

Hoofland's German Tonic

should be used.

The Bitters or the Tonic are both equally good, and contain the same medicinal virtues.

The stomach, from a variety of causes, such as Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Nervous Debility, etc., is very apt to have its functions deranged. The result of which is, that the patient suffers from several or more of the following diseases:

Constipation, Flatulence, Inward Piles Fulness of Blood to the Head, Acidity of the Stomach, Nausea, Heartburn, Disgust for Food, Fulness or Weight in the Stomach, Sour Eructations, Sinking or Fluttering at the Pit of the Stomach, Swimming of the Head, Hurried or Difficult Breathing, Fluttering at the Heart, Choking or Suffocating Sensations when in a Lying Posture, Dimness of Vision, Dots or Webs before the Sight, Dull Pain in the Head, Deficiency of Perspiration, Yellowness of the Skin and Eyes, Pain in the Side, Back, Chest, Limbs, etc., Sudden Flushes of Heat, Burning in the Flesh, Constant Imaginings of Evil, and Great Depression of Spirits.

These remedies will effectually cure Liver Complaint, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Chronic or Nervous Debility, Chronic Diarrhœa, Disease of the Kidneys, and all Diseases arising from a Disordered Liver, Stomach, or Intestines.

DEBILITY,

RESULTING FROM ANY CAUSE WHATEVER; PROSTRATION OF THE SYSTEM, INDUCED BY SEVERE LABOR, HARDSHIPS, EXPOSURE, FEVERS, ETC.

There is no medicine extant equal to these remedies in such cases. A tone and vigor is imparted to the whole System, the Appetite is Strengthened, food is enjoyed, the stomach digests promptly, the blood is purified, the complexion becomes sound and healthy, the yellow tinge is eradicated from the eyes, a bloom is given to the cheeks, and the weak and nervous invalid becomes a strong and healthy being.

Persons Advanced in Life,

And feeling the hand of time weighing heavily upon them, with all its attendant ills, will find in the use of this BITTERS, or the TONIC, an aid or assistance that will instil new life into their veins, restore in a measure the energy and ardor of more youthful days, build up their shrunken forms, and give health and happiness to their remaining years.

NOTICE.

It is a well-established fact that fully one-half of the female population of our country are seldom in the enjoyment of good health; or, to use their own expression, "never well." They are languid, devoid of all energy, extremely nervous, and have no appetite.

To this class of persons the BITTERS, or the TONIC, is especially recommended.

WEAK AND DELICATE CHILDREN

Are made strong by the use of either of these remedies. They will cure every case of MARASMUS, without fail.

Thousands of certificates have accumulated in the hands of the proprietor, but space will allow of the publication of but a few. Those, it will be observed, are men of note and of such standing that they must be believed.

TESTIMONIALS.

Philadelphia, March 16, 1867.

"I find 'Hoofland's German Bitters' is a good tonic, useful in diseases of the digestive organs, and of great benefit in cases of debility, and want of nervous action in the system.

"Yours truly,

"GEO. W. WOODWARD."

Hon. James Thompson,

Judge of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania.

Philadelphia, April 28, 1866.

"I consider 'Hoofland's German Bitters' a valuable medicine in case of attacks of Indigestion or Dyspepsia. I can certify this from my experience of it.

"Yours, with respect,

"JAMES THOMPSON."

From Rev. Joseph H. Kennard, D.D.,

Pastor of the Tenth Baptist Church, Philadelphia.

Dr. Jackson—Dear Sir: I have been frequently requested to connect my name with recommendations of different kinds of medicines, but, regarding the practice as one out of my appropriate sphere, I have in all cases declined; but with a clear proof in various instances and particularly in my own family, of the usefulness of Dr. Hoofland's German Bitters, I depart for once from my usual course, to express my full conviction that, for general debility of the system, and especially for Liver Complaint, it is a safe and valuable preparation. In some cases it may fail; but usually, I doubt not, it will be very beneficial to those who suffer from the above causes.

Yours, very respectfully,

J. B. KENNARD,

Eighth, below Coates St

From Rev. E. D. Fendall,

Assistant Editor Christian Chronicle, Philadelphia.

I have derived decided benefit from the use of Hoofland's German Bitters, and feel it my privilege to recommend them as a most valuable tonic to all who are suffering from general debility or from diseases arising from derangement of the liver.
